

LEARNER REGISTRATION DOCUMENT

Reebok Education offers three entry level short courses for those wanting to enter the exciting world of fitness as a Personal Trainer, Fitness Instructor or Group Instructor (Aerobics). Reebok Education is also the only licensed provider of vendor-based Reebok fitness training programmes (e.g. CycleReebok, ReeBall, RepReebok and WalkReebok). In addition, we offer a wide range of continuous education programmes that are linked to specific exercise formats (e.g. Aqua Aerobics, Dynamic Flexibility and Martial Arts).

There is a great deal of confusion surrounding the National Qualifications Framework (NQF) and the accreditation and registration of learning programmes and qualifications. This confusion is often relied upon by unscrupulous providers in order to undermine the value, appropriateness and necessity of short course training programmes. Short course training programmes are a legitimate and highly necessary form of training and skills development in all sectors. Short course training programmes are absolutely sufficient for the initial and continuous training of fitness professionals for the local South African and international fitness markets. Where professional registers (like 'REPS' in the United Kingdom, Europe, Australia and New Zealand) exist, these professional registering bodies will stipulate the breadth and depth of learning required for participation as a particular fitness professional (e.g. a Personal Trainer or Aerobics Instructor) and may require you to realise additional learning but your entry-level short course training will give you immediate access to the health and fitness sector while you acquire the additional learning units required to allow you to operate in the position that you want to. You may have to begin as an instructor on the floor while you realise the additional learning units (in the country you find yourself in) to satisfy accreditation benchmarks for say Personal Trainers or Aerobic Instructors and this experience can be very useful to you in finding the right position for yourself. Every country will have slightly different requirements since there is no global registering body for fitness professionals and so you would do better to add on the extra learning units required (if any) in the country in which you want to work. For the South African context, these short course training programmes are more than sufficient to be employed as a Fitness Instructor, Personal Trainer of Group Instructor (Aerobics).

Not all learning experiences satisfy the technical benchmark for full qualification status on the NQF because of the limited duration of the learning involved (less than 1200 hours in an academic year). Recognising that not all forms of training require 1200 hours of learning to achieve the desired training outcome, the South African Qualifications Authority (SAQA) are very clear on the viability and necessity for quality short course learning programmes in order to address specific short term forms of training required in most industrial sectors. If you have any doubts about the legitimacy of, and necessity for, short course training log onto the SAQA website at <http://www.saqa.co.za> and search for a document entitled "Criteria and Guidelines for Short Courses and Skills Programmes". Also, the NQF level (reflecting the difficulty and complexity) of a learning experience and the duration (how long it takes) of a learning experience should not be confused. The Reebok short courses present material that straddles NQF Levels 4, 5 and 6 and are therefore accessible to late high school (after Grade 10) learners but are most appropriate to post-high school (after Grade 12) education and training.

To build up a learning experience or qualification that constitutes 1200 hours of learning in a single academic cycle simply for the sake of registering a qualification of the NQF where the vocational sector requires far less than this (in terms of breadth and depth of knowledge and skills) is not only wasting learners' time and money but also fails to recognise how useful focused and well constructed short courses can be in providing candidates with an authentic, sufficient and relevant entry to a particular career pathway.

This registration form will give you an indication of the various courses as well as the fee structures, including payment details and payment options. Early registration is advisable since course commencement is subject to sufficient registrations being received. We would be happy to answer any further queries you may have regarding registration, payment, academic preparedness and career guidance.
